

Jupiter gave to man two wallets—one, containing his faults, to wear behind his back; the other, with other people's faults, to wear in front.

—Roman Fable

This isn't good news, but facts have to be known in order to be reckoned with. In a letter to Hope business men this month urging further development of the dairy industry on Hempstead county farms County Agricultural Agent Oliver L. Adams wrote as follows: "As long as people use good milk, good ice cream, and other good dairy products the dairy farmer is sure to be one of our best assets. Then consider this fact:

"The 1950 census showed us with 2,727 farm families. Today probably a census would give us 500 fewer farm families in Hempstead county. The census showed we had 1,444 farms with 49 acres or less of land in each farm. You most probably know the production requirements of quality dairy cattle and would readily agree that dairying offers us much under our type of situation."

There has been a decline in the number of farm units all over Arkansas and east Texas. The trend to beef cattle in place of row crops has stimulated larger holdings of land by fewer people, and there is the undeniable fact that some farmers have gone off to work in war plants.

But this only emphasizes the importance of stimulating production and markets which can be turned to the advantage of the small farmers remaining with us — 1,444 of them in Hempstead county, Mr. Adams says.

Dairy cattle, broiler production, are some of the answers.

You will recall we were doing all right in the milk business back in 1940, with the Kraft cheese factory here and many outside buyers of milk and cream — but the seizure of more than 50,000 acres for the Southwestern Proving Ground and the competition of industrial wages dealt dairying a hard blow. The Kraft plant went out.

We need to back up Hempstead county's farm economy, not only to meet changing times but to offset the damage that was done specifically by the SPG condemnation.

Our people recognize that while we were riding a warplant boom in the 1940's we are having to meet the competition of warplants in other sections in the 1950's. However, this is a tide that comes and goes; and from indications in other sections not everybody is happy with either the present size of the warplant operation or the personal security it offers workers in the near future.

The job of the home people is to make intelligent use of the farm plant now remaining — and that's something town and country try to work together on every where.

J. M. Duffie, chairman of the local draft board, said today the board is anxious to obtain information leading to the present whereabouts of Carl B. Bell, white registrant.

It is very important that Bell contact the board at once. If anyone knows where Bell is, the draft board would appreciate this information.

Prescott Has 16% School Assessing Gain

Although the Hope School District showed a gain of 13 per cent in 1951 tax assessments over 1950 a still better score was run up by the Prescott district in the battle to overcome the decline in state aid by improving tax support at the local level.

The Prescott School District shows a gain of 16 per cent in 1951 assessments against 1950. This was disclosed late yesterday when Hope Star visited the Nevada county seat and went over the assessment totals with Nevada County Clerk Gene Lee.

A visit also was paid to the office of Prescott School Superintendent Ed Smith for information on the school system's financial picture for the 1952-53 fiscal year in view of the improved assessment showing; but Mr. Smith was out. A statement will be sought from him later.

County Clerk Lee's 1951 figures show a total assessment of $2,547,494, against $2,191,301 for 1950 — a gain of slightly more than 16 per cent.

The Prescott district levies a tax of 38 mills. Taking the standard budget figure of 30 per cent collected this will give the Prescott district a total of $764,237.

TOP — Here is where seven and possibly eight persons died in Friday's tornado at Dierks. The picture, made at 6:30 p. m. from the town's northwest corner.

It shows the fragments of four homes. Reading left to right in the picture the home locations were those of: Rufe Allen, Marilyn Allen, and Buddy Allen, and 500 yards in the background the Moore home.

The stripped trees and shreds of galvanized-iron roofing tell of a scene of utter destruction. The ditch at the right marks the edge of the Dierks-DeQueen highway, on which the homes fronted.

Neighbors are walking away from the wreckage at the left with the dazed look that only a tornado can produce. Dozens of other people are in the background searching for bodies. When this picture was taken the disaster was only four hours old.

BOTTOM — This house, in the northeast corner of Dierks, was the only one of nine spared by the tornado. The picture was made at 6:10 p. m. Friday. No one was killed in this area — but the twister just missed the Dierks school building and 700 children. The children were in the building, 350 yards out of this photograph, when disaster went by.

'Phone Service Is Disrupted

Little Rock, March 22 (AP)—Eleven Arkansas communities were without telephone service as 300 circuits of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company were knocked out by yesterday's tornadoes.

F. H. Harvey, Little Rock area staff manager, estimated damage to the lines at $125,000.

Tornado Duplicates Path of '49 Storm

Little Rock, March 22 (AP)—The tornado path through Arkansas yesterday almost duplicated a swath torn by twisters on March 28, 1949, killing 17 persons.

In the 1949 storms, the first twister hit at Whelen Springs (Clark County) followed by lightning blows in the central section at England, Lonoke and Hazen, and in the north east at McCrory, Readeville and Balch.

Major Railways Still Operating

Little Rock, March 22 (AP)—Major railroads were able to keep their main lines open through the tornado-ravaged areas of Arkansas last night, but the communication lines were hard hit in some places.

Two Missouri Pacific Lines relief trains were sent to the area of Judsonia, Kensett and Russell early today to clear main line tracks of debris and repair communications. Mo-Pac officials said in Little Rock that 10 miles of communications were out at 5 a. m.

400 Guards Called to Aid Stricken Areas

Little Rock, March 22 (AP)—About 400 Arkansas National Guardsmen have been called into active duty to aid in the storm-stricken areas of Arkansas.

Two hundred fifty from Little Rock units were dispatched to various locations during the night. Another 150 were called up from units in Searcy, Beebe and Brinkley. One hundred additional men were standing by at Camp Robinson.

Every Member of Family Dead, Hurt

Judsonia, March 22 (AP)—Fifteen-year-old Glenda Fern Eadie went into town with her parents and two brothers to sell strawberry plants. They saw the storm bearing down on them and ran into a cave for shelter.

The sturdy brick building was flattened. Glenda's mother, Mrs. W. T. Eadie, and her brother Ed were killed. Her father and brother Bobbie were pulled from the wreckage critically hurt.

Red Cross Sends in Blood Plasma

Little Rock, March 22 (AP)—The American Red Cross here said a flight of the Chicago and Southern Airlines from St. Louis was delayed last night to allow shipment of 250 pints of blood plasma to Little Rock for use among injured victims of yesterday's tornadoes.

An additional 200 pints of the plasma was dispatched from Little Rock to the storm areas last night.

148 Killed In Arkansas; Four States Are Hit

Little Rock, March 22 (AP)—Tornadoes and flood blizzards five Southern states on the Mississippi River with a terrible fury yesterday and left 214 dead and more than 1,000 injured.

Rainstorms swirling on the perimeter of the storm's flooded tracks and at Scottville, Ky., seven members of one family drowned when their home was washed away.

Even as the rescue workers scrambled through the mud and debris of the storms, the Washington weather bureau warned that fresh tornadoes might hit this afternoon in Tennessee, Kentucky and Alabama.

By nightfall, the bureau added, the storm conditions would reach into the western parts of Virginia and West Virginia.

Up and down the Mississippi River in Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky and North Mississippi, later sections looked as if they had been hit by a vast artillery barrage.

Worst hit was Arkansas where the black funnels killed 140. Forty died in Tennessee, seven in Mississippi, 11 in Missouri and seven in Kentucky.

The Red Cross poured disaster workers into the region. A Little Rock bound plane was loaded with 250 pints of blood plasma in St. Louis.

Lord Held Wind Back, Says England Negro

England, March 22 (AP)—Lord held the wind back, says a tall, middle-aged Negro, accounting for his survival in the tornado which battered this central Arkansas community yesterday after noon.

Waiting for treatment for small cut on his nose, Davis with his forehead with a wilted handkerchief. He closed his bloodshot eyes as he recalled the storm.

"I saw the fire and smoke," he said. "People who got outside their houses were hurt, some killed. I wasn't killed or hurt as bad as those inside."

"The wind tore up the whole section and I don't know how many are dead. I ran outside by the door and lay down. The wind twisted over and over, but the storm was over the car like the Lord was holding it back and then it started tearing up the houses."

Stunned Victims View Ruined Homes

England, March 22 (AP)—A 71-year-old Negro looked down today on the ruins of his splintered wood home that had been his small home.

Lord knows what's going to happen to us now, he said. "I don't know what to do. I don't know what to do. I don't know what to do."

Across the fields and scores of other families in stunned silence viewed the wreckage that looked like a giant hand had torn a lumber yard's stock ground.

Will Walton, a relative, was just one of the many who looked on in dismay. "I looked out in my yard," Walton said, "and I found my wife's head in a hole. I found my wife's head in a hole."

"The next thing I was flat on my back front yard covered and lumber. My wife's head was in a hole. I found my wife's head in a hole."

"I got up and saw my wife's head in a hole. I found my wife's head in a hole. I found my wife's head in a hole."

"I didn't get to talk to many of the injured. Mostly they were huddled together and scared. The State Police had everything pretty much under control. They did a swell job."

Doctors and ambulances swarmed into Dierks from nearby Nashville and DeQueen.

Storms Predicted by Weather Base

Oklahoma City, March 22 (AP)—The Tinker Air Force Base today do warning system forecast that Arkansas storms might continue yesterday.

Tinker forecasters said that the Red Cross was sending blood plasma to the storm areas last night.

Police Four in

State police and county officers arrived in from all southwest Arkansas to maintain highway traffic on the Nashville-Dierks-DeQuen highway and to guard against looting. However, there was no trouble, and the dazed community seemed grateful for the help and attention.

Bergeant Milton Mosier of the state police arrived with State Officers Bell, Later, Downing, Hughes, Howell, Harper and Harris, of the Hope district office; and State Police Lieutenant Wilson brought two others with him from the Hot Springs office.

Sheriff Ambrose Chesbair of Howard county also was there, as was Sheriff Buck Baker of Lafayette county.

Hempstead Sheriff Claude Sutton, Deputy Allen Ship, and Hempstead Farm Agent Oliver L. Adams gathered up blood plasma where available and rushed it to the Nashville and DeQuen hospitals, then continued to Dierks.

The disaster was covered for press and radio from DeQuen, Hope, and Texarkana. Ray Kimball, DeQuen Citizen publisher, only 20 miles away, gave the running story to the newspaper wires from the Dierks telephone exchange. In the Hope group were Haskell Jones, Wm. Niemi, and L. B. Tooley of Station KXAR; and A. H. Washburn of Hope Star. The news reached Hope about 4 p. m. and radio and news facilities were set up in Dierks about 8:45.

Haskell Jones ran a 45-minute transcript interview with Dierks people between 7 and 8 at the Westbrook hotel, playing it back over KXAR at 10:15 Friday night, with a reprint at 9 Saturday morning.

In the interview Hotel Westbrook said that his daughter looked out a window and saw the tornado hit the northwest corner of town, Archie Cothren, rancher, told of rescue work. Mayor John Smithson of Dierks thanked everyone for their prompt response in the emergency.

DOROTHY DIX

Persistent Rumors

Dear Miss Dix: Perhaps many mothers have a problem like mine. When I was very young my husband died, leaving me with a baby daughter. I had very little no close relatives, but in spite of everything managed to keep the baby with me and support us both. When she was 6 years old, I married a fine man. He didn't have too much either but we gave the girl every advantage, including music and dancing lessons. At 20 she married and had a nice home and car. Reverses came to me and my husband and I went back to work to help. In the meantime my daughter had three children, and with each one I left my work to help her.

Now, she and her husband expect me to do all the baby-sitting besides helping with her housework. This I can't do because of my business. One evening recently when I visited them, my son-in-law pounced on me and said I had no right helping my husband with his business—that my place was with my grandchildren. He said he and his wife had a right to enjoy life and it was up to me to see that they did. My daughter stood by and agreed with every word.

I am heartbroken over their treatment. I love my daughter and the children so much and have never interfered or done anything that could cause such feeling on their part.

A. V. W. Answer: When you come up against a person who is so unreasonable in his demands that you know nothing you can do will please him, the sensible course is to stop all efforts of appeasement and decide from henceforth to suit your own. Your son-in-law is so obviously a man who wouldn't be pleased with heaven itself; that you're wasting time and money in wooing his favor.

No matter which way you turn in this dilemma, you'll be hurt, but the least thorny path leads back to your own life. Leave your daughter and her family alone; concentrate your efforts on creating a comfortable home life for your husband, on building your business together, and on getting some pleasure out of life for yourself.

When your selfish relatives realize you are no longer going to neglect your own home and suffer insults from them, they may realize what a treasure you've been all these years. There is such a thing as doing too much for some people, and the intelligent thing is to stop when you realize that your only value is as a giver.

You most certainly have no responsibility toward your daughters' children beyond giving them the love of a grandmother, along with such care as you are physically capable of. That you have done, and there your duty ends. Why should you be a slave in order that your son-in-law can go out when he likes and have a flag time? Believe me, if you were in need he'd turn from you so fast you wouldn't even have time to ask for anything. Your daughter's passive acquiescence, I'm afraid, is as bad as her husband's open animosity. Let her try caring for the youngsters with no grandmotherly aid and see how she likes it.

Dear Miss Dix: My mom and dad don't seem to trust me. Though I always tell them where I go and when I will be home, they still won't let me go with boys. I'm 18, and they say 20 is the proper age to begin dating. I'm not even allowed to go to the early show with a boy.

Answer: Have you, at any time, done something that would make your parents distrust you? At 18, you are quite old enough to have boy friends, but there may be some underlying reason for your parents' objections. Honest discussion will bring it out.

Dear Miss Dix: I've about given up hope on my problem but perhaps there is a little comfort some where. I had been going out with a very nice boy, and though marriage wasn't mentioned between us, I took it for granted, as he said he loved me. Then suddenly he stopped coming to see me. He still phones once in a while, but if he has stopped caring I'd much rather he left me alone. I heard he had another girl, and if he's serious about her I'd like to know that too.

MAYBELLE Answer: Since the boy had expressed his love for you, you are entitled to know why his attitude has changed so suddenly. You'll be better off to know the truth, even if it is painful. Uncertainty is the worst condition we can endure and if you clear up the question of his feelings for you, your mind at least will be at rest. Perhaps

Louis to replenish the supply distributed by blood centers here.

The storm, forecast by the U. S. Weather Bureau, blitzed Arkansas from the southwest section to the northeast tip.

White County in the strawberry country of Arkansas alone had 73 dead. The towns of Judsonia and Bald Knob, about 50 miles northeast of here, were leveled. Only the Methodist church in Judsonia escaped unscathed.

"The damage and human suffering is terrific," said Marvin Crittenden, director of relief services for the Arkansas Welfare Department. "The whole highway south from Searcy looks like picture show scenes of battlefields. It is awful."

School houses, churches and armories in many places were swamped with the rain-soaked, shivering injured. Hospitals were jammed.

This was by far the worst storm ever to hit Arkansas. The deadliest previous storm was June 5, 1916, when 80 persons were killed. The highest single day's toll from tornadoes was the death March 18, 1925, of 669 people in Missouri, Illinois and Indiana.

The tales of death were many. There were escapes, too. None was more miraculous than that of a blind man, Henry Wilkins, 77, of Marked Tree. He sat helplessly while the wind shattered his home around him. His wife was critically hurt.

The dead, by states: Arkansas—White County, 73; Cotton Plant, 10; England, 9; Dierks, 7; Center Point, 5; Hazen, 3; Carlisle, Marked Tree and Hickory Ridge, two each; Trumann and Wittensaw, one each.

Mississippi—Byhalia, 7, and Manila, 1.

Tennessee—Dyersburg, 14; Henderson, 9; Moscow, 6 and one each in Medina, Leach and Chesterfield.

Missouri—Caruthersville, area. At Dyersburg, Tenn., a black funnel of wind dipped out of the sky, snatched up the squad car of Tennessee State Patrol Sgt. Joe Williamson, and hurled it 300 yards.

At Judsonia, Ark., 15-year-old Glenda Fern Eadie went into town with her parents and two brothers to sell strawberry plants. They saw the storm bearing down on them and ran into a cafe for shelter.

The sturdy brick building was flattened. Glenda's mother, Mrs. W. E. Eadie, and her brother Ed were killed. Her father and brother Bobbie were pulled from the ruins critically hurt.

But the girl couldn't be found. After five hours of feverish digging in the wreckage, rescuers reached Glenda Fern—dead.

At England, Ark., Nathan Davis accounted for his escape from death this way:

"The Lord held the wind back." The tall, middle aged Negro said he saw the twister coming and ran outside and fell beside his car. "The wind twisted me over and over, but the storm went over the car like the Lord was holding it back, and then it started tearing up the houses."

Little Rock, March 22 (AP)—Spring tornadoes zig-zagged a path of death, destruction and misery across four Southern states late yesterday. Early today the number of reported dead stood at 167.

Hundreds of others were injured and still more were left homeless by the black, whirling winds in Arkansas, Missouri, Tennessee and Mississippi. Property and livestock losses were tremendous.

The death toll was expected to mount as rescue operations expanded at daylight in a score or more of devastated towns.

The Little Rock Gazette figured the dead in Arkansas alone at 123, based on reports from its staffers and correspondents. An area-by-area checklist compiled by The Associated Press listed 103 in Arkansas.

Missouri counted 14 dead in the Caruthersville area, in the southwestern part of the state near Arkansas. West Tennessee reported 22 fatalities and North Mississippi counted seven killed.

The storm, forecast by the U. S. Weather bureau, swirled a deadly trail from Southwest Arkansas to the state's northeast tip.

Hardest hit was the famous strawberry producing area of White County, Ark., where 62 dead were counted. The towns of Judsonia and Bald Knob, about 50 miles northeast of Little Rock, were practically leveled. The only building unscathed in Judsonia was the Methodist church.

A portion of Searcy, the county seat of White County, was damaged but no deaths were reported there.

"The damage and human suffering is terrific," said Martin Crittenden, director of relief services for the Arkansas Welfare Department. "The whole highway south from Searcy looks like picture show scenes of battlefields. It's awful."

Gov. Sid McMath, who arrived at Searcy early last night, said the ruin and suffering in that area "is terrible."

The American Red Cross reported it had ordered disaster workers "from all over the country" into the stricken areas.

At some points, hail, rain and fire added to the misery and hampered rescue operations. Power lines and communications also were knocked out, further hindering the grim chores of national guardsmen, state police and volunteer relief workers.

The Arkansas Gazette estimated 700 persons were injured in Arkansas, and hundreds more were reported hurt in other three ravaged states.

Three deadly funnels of wind struck West Tennessee in the Dyersburg area, where 11 were reported dead. Other casualty reports in Tennessee had nine killed at Henderson, six at Moscow, and one each in Medina, Leach and Chesterfield.

The Mississippi highway patrol said seven persons were killed when a twister ripped through that small north Mississippi town.

This was by far the worst of many tornado disasters which have hit Arkansas through the years. The previous record death toll was 86 in twisters which swept across the state June 5, 1916. The highest single day's death toll for tornadoes recorded is 669 killed in Missouri, Illinois and Indiana March 18, 1925.

Funeral homes were swamped. The dead were stacked like cordwood at Searcy while attention was given first to the injured.

Hospitals likewise were jammed. Aid stations were set up in schools, churches, national guard armories and other suitable standing buildings in the disaster areas.

The first of the death-dealing twisters hit Dierks, small lumber town about 110 air miles southwest of Little Rock about 2:45 p. m. Seven persons were killed there. In addition to the dead in White County and Dierks, a breakdown of the known dead in Arkansas included:

North and west of Cotton Plant, 10; Center Point, 5; England, 9; Hazen, 3; Carlisle, 2; Marked Tree, 2; Hickory Ridge, 2; Wat-tensaw, 1, and Trumann, 1.

Omer Henley, a Little Rock truck driver, was in England when the storm hit there. He said it sounded like "hundred B-36s flying low" and was "the most perfectly shaped funnel you've ever seen."

D. C. Phipps of Little Rock was driving a transport truck near Judsonia when the winds came. Suddenly a house came flying across the highway and smashed into the truck. Phipps suffered only scratches and hitch-hiked into nearby Beebe with one of the first reports of the disaster.

National Guardsmen and other aid was summoned to Searcy personally by Gov. McMath. He was at Haber Springs—about 25 miles from Searcy—to deliver a speech when he heard of the tornadoes. He hurried to Searcy and managed to get word through to Little Rock.

Amateur radio operators helped relay emergency messages. At most storm-wrecked communities, the residents were to busy handling the dead and injured to think about surveying property damage. However, Merchant Robert Sakon estimated the loss at England alone at $150,000 to $200,000. That will be only a small drop in the bucket as far as the overall damage is concerned. It probably will be days—maybe weeks—before anything close to an accurate compilation is made.

London, March 22 (AP)—The British Commonwealth Relations five said Ceylon's Premier Don Stephen Senanayake died today.

The 87-year-old statesman was thrown from a horse while riding in a Colombo park yesterday, suffering a severe brain concussion.

Phillips Cage Team Again in Finals

Denver, March 22 (AP)—Peoria's Caterpillars, in the finals for the first time battle the perennial titleholders from Bartlesville, Okla., in tonight's championship game of the National Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) Basketball Tournament.

They breezed by their semi-final opponents last night with easy victories. The Bartlesville Phillips 66ers, with seven-foot Bob Kurland at the controls, outlasted the hustling U. S. Air Force All Stars 60-49. The 11111111 Caterpillars solved the deliberate ball control game of Hollywood's Pibber McGee and Molly team 49-34.

Hollywood sidelined defending champion San Francisco Stewart Chevrolet in Thursday's quarter-final round 43-41.

Phillips, aiming for its eighth championship in the last 10 AAU meets, has been a finalist 13 times in the last 16 tournaments. Peoria reached the semi-finals in 1948 and in 1951.

The Air Force team from Oklahoma City's Tinker Field, and Hollywood will play for third and fourth places.

The Air Force club stayed even with the lowering Phillips team until Kurland, Bus Whitehead and Paul County flipped in eight straight points to send the Oklahoma team in front to stay 28-30 with 3 minutes 46 seconds remaining in the first half.

Kurland and most of the other Phillips starters retired to the bench after building a 52-37 lead at the end of the third quarter.

Michigan's shore line on the Great Lakes is the largest among the states of the United States, exceeding that of Florida with the longest salt water shore line.
